

END-OF-LIFE CARE

A New Approach to Difficult Conversations

This workshop is designed to assist health care providers with the difficult end-of-life conversations they have with their patients and families.

Participants will:

- Look at how their personal views and social barriers on the topic of death impact the care they give
- Practice simple techniques they can use for effective end-of-life conversations

Speaker: Erin Putney, RN, MSN, has years of Oncology and Trauma ICU experience and in addition to teaching in the nursing program at Southeast Community College, she works in a variety of bed-side nursing positions. Her master's research focused on Effective End-of-Life Education for Nursing students and has been adapted for doctors, nurses and allied health professionals.
